

I am strongly opposed to any FCC rule change that will enable greater media consolidation. Effects of past deregulation have proven that such moves by the FCC homogenize programming, hurt competition, and most importantly, degrade the quality of news broadcasts and publications. The latter is particularly disturbing, as a democracy cannot survive without an independent press.